

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

Grant Wood was born on a farm near the small town of Anamosa, in 1891. By painting simple scenes of the land and people he knew best, he helped create an important, all-American style of art. Grant Wood's paintings show the love he had for the people and customs of the Midwestern United States. Grant Wood particularly loved the farmland of Iowa.

Grant did a lot of different things. He took art classes, taught art, made jewelry, learned carpentry, decorated people's houses and cared for his mother and his sister Nan.

Grant kept working in his new style and soon painted his most famous picture, American Gothic.

Grant also started an art colony, and designed one of the largest stained glass windows ever made. Grant wood died in 1942.

